Treatment can begin after your arrested and the judge sentences you to jail. Jail time, a Restraining Order keeping you away from the victim, and a domestic violence treatment program is usually the sentence from the judge.

While in custody, take advantage of all services that are available to you.

Pastoral Counseling is a great beginning to breaking your Cycle of Violence and a new life with God.

Achieve the Four R's
Take Responsibility for your actions
Be Remorseful of what you did

Repair the way you think so it does not happen again
Become Righteous and obey the law and God

When released the batterer/abuser must successfully complete a domestic violence prevention program.

- ❖ Complete Domestic Violence Prevention Program
- ❖ Attend weekly meetings of CA/NA/AA if you having a history of using or abusing drugs and/or alcohol
- ❖ Have a psychiatric evaluation
- ❖ Comply with taking psychiatric medication if recommend by the psychiatrist
- ❖ Attend individual therapy
- ❖ Comply with all court orders
- ❖ Clear all warrants issued by the court and/or police department
- ❖ Pay all fines
- ❖ Bring up to date any delinquent child support payments and /or alimony payments
- ❖ Secure a stable residence and steady employment

The batterer/abuser should not consider being in any relationship until he successfully completes the following:

- ❖ Completes his time in jail or prison
- ❖ While in custody has taken advantage of all services for a successful transition into the community
- ❖ Is in compliance with all probation/parole conditions after being released from custody
- ❖ Abstains from using drugs and/or alcohol
- ❖ Notifies new friends that you are a batterer/abuser in recovery
- ❖ Uses the Time Out Method when angry and out of control

Individual counseling, and a community domestic violence treatment program will help you prepare for a new life with or without the victim.

Many times reunification is not possible. The batterer/abuser will move on and begin a new relationship using his non-violent responses.
